The Right Choice

No one knows your horses better than you when selecting the right corrals and shelters.

- To keep them safely inside the corrals, select the height of your panels to be proportionate to the height of your horses. The 5' high panels are suitable in most cases.
- Placing heads between rails often causes unsightly mane rubbing, so consider the rail spacing of the pipe panel. Our most common panels are 5' high and 4-rail.
- The disposition of your horse should determine the height of the panel or number of rails for added strength on dividing wall panels.
- Depending on your style and configuration preferences, optional cut-outs for feed mangers can be a convenient feature.
